Introductory Training

This 2-day introductory training meets the prerequisite hours for the Sandplay Therapy Certification program.
This course enables participants to learn and discuss the history of sandplay therapy and also experience some of the fundamental concepts and theories that will then be elaborated upon in the future modules. Attending this seminar is a great way to become familiar to the modality of Sandplay Therapy and its benefits for clients (all ages but with an emphasis on children). Social Workers, Special Education teachers, and psychotherapists working in the field of mental health would benefit from this workshop.

Learning Objectives:
-understand the basic theory of Sandplay Therapy
-understand how Sandplay Therapy activates healing from within the psyche through experiential exercises
-presented case material will demonstrate how the technique shows positive changes in the clients

Facilitator: Sylvia Simonyi-Elmer has been an Internationally Certified Sandplay Therapist since 1997. She is a founding member of CAST and was the National Representative for CAST on the ISST Board for 8 years. She currently serves on the CAST Board and is considered one the Senior Teaching Members of CAST. She is a Registered Psychotherapist and is also a Supervisor with Play Therapy International. She has been in private practice in Kingston since 1993. Prior to her private practice she was employed at the Muki Baum Association as their Psychometrist/ Therapist.

"Sandplay is a form of active imagination… Even a single sandtray can have healing power… In the Sandplay process, one can often see order emerging from the chaos"

- BRADWAY & MCCOARD

SANDPLAY THERAPY

Dora Kalff developed Sandplay therapy, a psychotherapeutic approach for children and adults, in the late 1950s.

Through spontaneous imaginative play in trays of wet or dry sand, clients sculpt sand and place miniature figurines and objects to create three-dimensional scenes. In the "free and protected space" of the therapeutic environment, these sand pictures express and mediate between clients' inner and outer worlds, and promote healing and wholeness.

Sandplay's therapeutic effectiveness in working with childhood trauma has been documented in:

Trauma Through a Child's Eyes, Peter Levine & Maggie Kline;

Helping Abused and Traumatized Children, Eiana Gil.
